As a new resident of Shoreline I have had several dealings with Ronald Wastewater regarding sewer location, connection, and service. The office staff has always been available and helpful with whatever was needed, providing current and historical maps of pipe line routing and locations. There has always been someone there to answer the phone calls in person (rare these days). The recent reduction in the cost of our wastewater bill is a good example of a single minded dedication to serving just one purpose, that being efficient cost affective service to the local residents. With a special purpose district like this there is no distraction from the job at hand and the elected representatives have a clear and straight forward job to do unmuddled by conflicting demands for funds, or needs for maintenance equipment, or staff time. There are compelling reasons for maintaining Ronald Wastewater but rather they are kept, or Shoreline assumes the service the matter should go to a vote. This is a matter that affects the tax burden of every resident of Shoreline and so the residents should have a vote in what happens. Very simply there should be no taxation without representation, in this specific case the change in taxing authority should be put to a vote and not just assumed.

Ginny Scantlebury ran for Ronald Wastewater Commissioner because she wanted to give the people the right to vote on this issue. If she received 15% of the voters signatures it would have qualified to be put on the ballot. She received 48% plus in the election and I think that qualifies for a place on the ballot.

I've long opposed Shoreline's assumption of the Ronald Wastewater District. Among other reasons, it's a shameful power-grab on the part of our city. Ronald's just fine as is, thank you very much . . . our citizens ought to have a voice in this!

Mr. Thomas Jamieson, WA

Institutional choices for service provision are complex. For each service, there are many decisions to be made in choosing the best service delivery option for a particular community. Should the service be provided by the private, non-profit, or public sector? If by public sector, should it be provided at the federal, state, or local level? If at the local level, should the choice be made by local government officials, private developers, or metropolitan residents? Once the decision has been made to provide the service through local government, and the decision maker has been decided, then and only then can a proper choice be made between special purpose government and general purpose government. There are some 90,000 governments currently in existence in the United States. These include school districts, fire departments, utility districts, port authorities, library districts, cemeteries, and scores of others. To coalesce these into 50 states, 23,000 cities and towns, and 3,144 counties (a 70% reduction in governmental units) would be cost-prohibitive, and would be wrong. Special purpose governments provide substantial administrative and fiscal independence from general purpose local governments, thus limiting investment risk, and a dependency on fickle priorities based on competing interests for unrestricted funds. Districts have their proper place in this vast array. They are the right choice in many cases. Counties, cities and special purpose districts are all biased in favor of their own self-preservation. They cannot be expected to make the institutional choices outlined above. Only the state legislature and the citizens of the state have the ability and inclination to choose from the various institutional possibilities. And only the people of a particular community have the perspective and the right to make the local choice. The people reserve the right to dismantle the instruments we have created, including our institutions. The people should not surrender to their county or city government the power to assume the assets of their special purpose districts and the operation of those assets. Nor should they give the special purpose districts they have created the authority to abdicate on their responsibility by handing over their jurisdiction to the cities. The exception would be subordinate governments created ex officio, but such is not the case here. Past legislatures apparently have given local governments the power to horse trade our infrastructure, and this has caused much unrest and litigation within our communities. The GMA addresses the question of which urban services should be provided in rural areas, and which in urban areas. It is concerned with planning for optimal land use by selected counties and cities, not with optimal government. This has been distorted like a game of telephone into a question of the demerits of special purpose districts. But such a question ought not be decided by rule. It must be decided in examination of the particulars, which is where assumption legislation always seems to originate. The Legislature should get out of the business of legislating to particulars, and leave such matters to the local control of the voters.

 Ronald Sewer District has been successful for decades both in maintaining the sewer system and in keeping costs down. Ronald employees are skilled and committed to their work and have served us well. We the citizens who pay for the system should have a say (vote) in who runs it!! Please bring this issue to a vote!
