~~Councilmembers discussed that the City's contributions pays for staff and does not pay for conservation work, reductions in federal and state funding support, and ways Cities can help to increase funding.~~ Councilmembers noted that the City's contribution pays for administrative staff and does not pay for conservation work. Councilmembers discussed reductions in federal and state funding support, and expressed interest in exploring how the City can become more active in assisting with salmon recovery, which has been slow due to limited funding. They stated support for the WRIA and continuing the Interlocal Agreement. They discussed the critical need and complexity of restoring Chinook salmon runs, and securing additional funding for this effort. Mr. Mulvihill-Kuntz expressed optimism for funding, and explained that the State Legislature is looking to multiple benefit projects which fund projects that benefit more than one area and can address flood risk, storm water management and habitat improvement.
