The city has not produced any research that supports rezoning this extensively. What scanty research regarding the 185th station area has been done supports the opposite (i.e. market assessment, Sound Transit recommendation and “design dialogue” workshops with feedback from the community, developers and real estate professionals). Shoreline would have been better off having a high school class take on researching and planning these rezoning endeavors versus the city staff. We would hopefully have gotten high school level quality at least. I don’t think submitting a paper with just assertions and no evidence supporting my assertions would have ever gotten me a passing grade in middle school even and submitting a paper with assertions that were contradicted by my evidence would definitely have gotten me a failing grade but 4 members of the council feel this faulty workmanship is sufficient to impact thousands of people's lives negatively. Thank you to the other three councilmembers who realized there are flaws in the current plans.

I am sure the 145th station area has had a similar lack of quality research and planning and I cannot support moving forward with studying a preferred alternative until these issues are rectified. At least the planning commission has finally realized that more information is needed before decisions of this magnitude are decided. You should respect their decision and wait until the corridor study is complete. Use the extra time to take a long hard look at your process and your faulty methods. Thank you.
