I took my son to enjoy the newly renovated Echo Lake Park on Saturday. He enjoyed the playground and loved running around but he also wanted to go play in the large mud puddle in the middle of the park by the playground (see attached picture). Are there plans to fix these drainage issues? I do have to express concern that if the city can't mitigate properly for drainage/water issues during a renovation of a small city park that they are not qualified to decide on huge rezones with no hydrology studies. You don't have to keep making the same mistakes that you made with the 185th Station Area rezone. Make better decisions for the 145th Station Area rezone. Listen to your planning commission, do research, request actual data and facts from your staff and the special interest groups not just what they think, use precedence, let the opposing side present their information and use common sense. Thank you.
