Shoreline City Council:

The subject of my comments tonight is communication. Once again, the city staff didn't let residents know ahead of time about an important meeting. This time it was the Critical Area Conversation, scheduled for May 5 at the Richmond Beach Library. The first any of us had heard of this was when we received the Shoreline Currents on Friday, May 1. 5 days in advance of a meeting is not very much notice. In addition, the Richmond Beach Library meeting room is very small with a capacity of about 70 people or so. Even with the short notice, the room was overflowing. Your choice of the North City Water District meeting room for Thursday, May 14's meeting is much better.

Also, the City asked the public for feedback on the regulations, but did not tell anyone where those regulations could be found. There was no mention or links to SMC 20.80 (which was handed to us at the meeting when we walked in) or RCW 36.70A on the City's Critical Areas webpage. These links weren't there last week and they still aren't there. If you really want the public's feedback, it would help to get these links to them before the meeting so they can understand the regulations better.

Thank you for listening and I am submitting this for public record.
