Subject: Backyard camps for the homeless

Of course we must ensure that our most vulnerable citizens have shelter, especially in freezing weather. But scattered in backyards throughout the city is no solution. To the extent that the churches can provide camps, this is a stop-gap solution, but as a community, we must dig deep enough solve this problem.

Why are we looking at Seattle's failed approaches rather than at Salt Lake City's success? See <http://www.newyorker.com/magazine/2014/09/22/home-free>
