7. I have been working with my church social justice committee for several years. The issue of homelessness is a difficult problem and the numbers seem to keep growing. It may also get worse due to the lack of the federal government to act to extend the COV-19 relief. The lesson learned by the housing provided by King County during this crisis is that people begin to do better when they have there own space. The location of of the old Arden Nursing Center is ideal for such a purpose. I have been in it visiting a resident before. I hope that the Council will approve this wonderful opportunity for additional housing for at least a few years while this country tries to recover from this virus and downturn. When there is only one job with 5 applicants available we will still have lots of people at the edge of homelessness for sometime to come. Think of the people that will benefit from this opportunity.
