7. I think we can all learn important lessons from self-managed Camp United We Stand.

Established in 2014, Camp United We Stand does not allow drugs, alcohol or any kind of violence.

It requires residents to participate in serving the camp and in decision making. Violation of these rules results in disciplinary action, up to the resident being barred from the camp.

I believe that any enhanced shelter should operate similarly.
Residents should be required to participate in treatment and to make a contribution towards operating the shelter.

I believe that any enhanced shelter should require attendance at regular meetings to go over rules and discuss questions or problems experienced by residents or staff.

If housing is a right, then responsibility is essential.

Rights cannot exist without duties as they are two sides of the same coin.

Duties without rights forces us into slavery.

But rights without duties makes us lawless.

Thank you,
