How Do We Move Through Conflict as We Build Community?

Facilitated by Aisha Hauser

Background

The January Council of Neighborhoods meeting traditionally offers neighborhood leaders an opportunity to develop skills. These trainings often focus on issues or concerns that surfaced during the previous year.

Purpose of 2021 Training

With ever-deepening divisions nationally, regionally, and locally, conflict is all around us. However, few of us have the skills to deal with conflict. Even with the best of intentions, we easily sabotage ourselves and cause more damage to others.

The goal of this training is to give CON members and other participating neighborhood leaders a better understanding of how to approach people honestly, directly, and respectfully.

Training Content

This training includes small breakout sessions to help participants identify their personal communication styles, and to reflect on how it affects others. In the last breakout session, groups will consider how to integrate communication skills in their work with community.
