I'm a new resident in the Shoreline area, having moved here from Portland, OR where I experienced the gentrification of my neighborhood of 40+ years. I can understand the need for more housing in the metropolitan area. But I chose to live at Ballinger Commons because it was surrounded by trees and included extensive greenery. I believe that such a natural setting is an important piece to thriving in an dense urban environment.

I would hate to see the forested areas of Shoreline reduced in exchange for more residential multiplexes without an healthy environment of living spaces integrated with nature.

Thanks for listening!
